

Sailing Ship

Hugh Bourne sailed to North America in his seventies in the 1840s. He was a bad sailor and suffered with sea-sickness.

He sailed across the Atlantic on a sailing ship, and was fascinated by the steam ships he saw in America.

- Colour the paper plate and draw lines across to look like timbers. You can glue buttons or bottle tops on for portholes.
- Cut the plate evenly in half.
- Stick the 2 halves of the paper plate together at the curved edges, leaving an open pocket.
- Cut sails out of paper and decorate them and push them onto wooden skewers or straws and stick inside the pocket, along with a Hugh Bourne!
